

Running a blog isn't just writing, it involves much more than that. As a blogger you need to be somewhat a jack of all trades, you need to be good at writing, you need to know a bit about coding, design, video editing, SEO, etc. When you're just getting started it's okay to do everything yourself, but as your blog grows spreading out your focus on tasks that don't require too much creative input makes you inefficient. It's much better to focus on your strengths and not on your weaknesses. This is where outsourcing comes in. When you want to scale your blog quickly the best thing that you can do is outsource everything you aren't good at and focus on creating content. Now, how and when do you start outsourcing? To answer this question I interviewed 6 bloggers that are experienced in outsourcing, who are already spending money to grow their blogs quickly and I put their answers in this book. So, if you want to learn how to scale your blog quickly using outsourcing, then grab this book now!
